

Dear guests,

The sun is just rising above the horizon, casting a golden light over the landscape. It's Monday morning, 5:45 a.m. The alarm clock rings, and the streets are still almost deserted. Winemaker Paul has already had his first cup of coffee and is slipping into his shoes. There's a lot to do because, in recent weeks, the inconspicuous green berries have developed into nearly ripe grapes. Now, in the final days before the harvest, we have the chance to watch him as he prepares.

In the vineyard, the primary task is to determine the optimal harvest time for each plot. This requires regularly measuring the ripeness of the grapes. The most important factor in assessing ripeness is the sugar content, usually measured with a technical device called a refractometer. When it comes to evaluating aroma ripeness and tannin quality, Paul relies on his built-in measuring instrument: his taste.

To ensure he doesn't miss the perfect moment when sugar, acidity, tannins, and aroma are in balance, Paul must constantly keep an eye on the vineyard while also watching the sky. Rainy or particularly hot weather can affect the health of the grapes and ruin months of work. Over the decades, Paul has learned how his plots develop during ripening and when it's time to harvest. His father and grandfather also passed on their knowledge to him. While some of their old sayings might make him smile, there is a lot of practical advice in this heritage.

When it's time for the harvest, everything in the cellar must be ready as well. Paul knows that winemaking can only lead to the desired result if everything is kept clean. However, he prefers to leave the cleaning to his interns. Instead, Paul focuses on ensuring that all necessary materials, such as yeasts, barrels, and other tools, are ordered and that there is enough space in the winery to process the incoming grapes.

The fruits of Paul's hard work, and that of winemakers around the world, can be found on this menu. We wish you much enjoyment as you read and, above all, as you savor the wines.

Champagne

Coco Chanel enjoyed it in both happy and melancholic times. However, there is also the belief that it should be reserved for the special moments in life. It is served at every elegant celebration, and just opening a bottle is a little event in itself. Here is our exquisite selection of champagne.

Rosé Champagne

Did you know that two of the three grape varieties used for champagne are red? For most champagnes, the red varieties Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier are vinified white, producing a light-colored champagne. Rosé champagne is not only different in color. These wines have aromas of strawberries and raspberries and are more opulent and rich.

— Sparkling and Effervescent Wines —

Sparkling and effervescent wines owe their uniqueness to the carbon dioxide that gives them liveliness and freshness. This molecule, which we also produce when we breathe, lifts the mood and makes everyday life a bit lighter. Excellent sparkling and effervescent wines are found worldwide, and we present here a selection from Germany, France, and Italy. A significant difference between sparkling and effervescent wines lies in the pressure within the bottle. Effervescent wines have a pressure of less than 2.5 bar, while sparkling wines have a pressure of over 3 bar. This is higher than the pressure in a car tire, so be careful when the cork pops!

Riesling

No other grape variety represents German wine as impressively as Riesling. Over 100 years ago, it produced some of the world's most expensive wines and remains among the highest quality white grape varieties today. Riesling is appreciated worldwide, but it thrives nowhere as splendidly as in Germany. Its ability to reflect terroir and climate makes it a special delight that captivates wine lovers on every continent. Discover our selection of exquisite Rieslings and experience the uniqueness of this remarkable grape variety.

Pinot Gris

Hardly any grape variety is as trendy as Pinot Gris, and there are good reasons for that. This variety is distinguished by its diverse flavor profiles, which can vary depending on the region and production methods. Wines made from this grape are often full-bodied with flavors of ripe apples, pears, honey, and occasionally a hint of almonds.

Pinot Blanc

Pinot Blanc, also known as Weißburgunder, is the lighter sibling of Pinot Gris. While Pinot Gris has colored berry skins, Pinot Blanc is characterized by its light-colored grapes. Unleashing the full potential of this grape variety requires great skill. However, the following winemakers have mastered the art of showcasing the unique characteristics of Pinot Blanc.

Chardonnay

If there is a grape variety that could challenge Riesling for the title "King of White Wines," it would be Chardonnay. In Burgundy, some of the most complex and prestigious wines in the world are crafted from Chardonnay. This grape variety exhibits remarkable versatility and expression that captivates both wine lovers and connoisseurs alike.

Domaine Leflaive

The small estate in Burgundy, whose history dates back to 1717, has risen to the top of the wine world in the 20th century. The Chardonnays of Domaine Leflaive are among the most sought-after wines in France today. The Leflaive family has always placed great emphasis on environmentally friendly practices and has been a pioneer of biodynamic viticulture in Burgundy.

The most famous vineyards of Domaine Leflaive are located in the Côte de Beaune, particularly around the Le Montrachet vineyard. The neighboring vineyards also bear the "Montrachet" name. This area of Burgundy is considered the epicenter of the Chardonnay world, as nowhere else produces wines of such high quality and distinction from this grape variety.

Sauvignon Blanc

Sauvignon Blanc is a true delight in the glass. Its intense bouquet combines ripe fruits, grassy notes, and spices in a fascinating way. Sauvignon Blanc invigorates the senses with its unmistakable freshness and pairs excellently with a variety of dishes. Its high levels of pyrazines give it a characteristic flavor that, when harvested too early, is known as "Cat's Pee" but is appreciated by experts for its distinctiveness.

— Cuvées and other white grape varieties —

There are countless grape varieties in the world, not all of which receive equal attention. However, that doesn't mean they are any less remarkable. Those who have tasted a fresh Grüner Veltliner or enjoyed a superb Albariño with seafood understand exactly what it's all about.

Rosé

Rosé wine is undoubtedly still trending. For a long time, this wine was considered merely a byproduct of red wine production, but in recent decades, it has made significant strides in terms of quality. Today, Rosé wines are clearer and more sophisticated than ever before. They are no longer just for the terrace but rather perfect companions to dishes that bring depth and complexity.

Orange Wines

Orange wines are currently one of the most exciting wine styles worldwide. These wines are produced by allowing white grape skins to remain in contact with the juice for an extended period. This process often gives the wine a more or less intense orange color. More importantly, it transforms the aromas and flavors of the wine. The compounds in the grape skins, including aromas and tannins, impart a completely new dimension to the wine.

While this technique has been used in some regions of the world for centuries, it is experiencing a comeback in the established wine world, significantly enriching the spectrum of wine styles available.

Hospices de Beaune

The bells ring. Excited voices fill every corner. Wine merchants, journalists, and wine enthusiasts sit closely packed in the "Halles de Beaune," eagerly awaiting the auction of hundreds of wine barrels. Prior to this moment, there was earnest tasting and discussion about the vintage quality and the evaluation of different wines. We too felt the tension in the room, as our team from Brenners Park-Hotel did not want to return from Burgundy empty-handed. Therefore, we carefully studied the auction catalog and prepared our bidding paddle.

In the heart of Burgundy, an auction has been taking place for over 160 years that is unparalleled. The Hospices de Beaune produces more than 50 wines from its best vineyard sites across 61 hectares. The unique aspect: Hospices de Beaune is not actually a winery but a former hospital. It possesses an impressive diversity of vineyards. The proceeds from the annual auction are donated to charitable causes.

The story of Hôtel-Dieu began in 1443. The Hundred Years' War had ended, and the population suffered from the hardships of recent decades. Nicolas Rolin, the Chancellor of Burgundy, founded a hospice to aid the poorest and most needy. The magnificent Gothic building with colorful roof tiles was no ordinary hospice. The wealthy chancellor spared no effort to create a palace for the poor and needy. The bourgeoisie donated artworks and lands, and winemakers contributed parcels of vineyards. In 1795, the first auction was held to sell the esteemed wine barrels.

Returning to the 161st auction, where the Brenners Park-Hotel team had the privilege of attending. The atmosphere was lively, and the highlight was undoubtedly the auction of "the Pièce des Présidents", which fetched a proud 800,000 euros for charity. We too were successful, and today we can present to you for the first time the 2021 Monthélie Les Duresses Cuvée Lebelin. This wine is named after Etienne Lebelin, the first hospital chaplain of Hospice de la Charité. It comes from a cooler site and, according to Burgundy expert Jasper Morris MW, has produced an aromatic wine with a fine and elegant finish in 2021.

German Pinot Noir

Pinot Noir, also known as Spätburgunder in German, is one of the most influential grape varieties in the world. It is not only directly related to Pinot Blanc and Pinot Gris but also serves as a parent to a large number of now established grape varieties. Great Pinot Noirs are unmatched in intensity, complexity, and longevity. Burgundy is considered the birthplace of Pinot Noir, but Germany today also produces some of the finest wines from this grape variety.

Special, Red, German

Germany is a land of red wine. In fact, we produce more red wine here than one might expect. Two-thirds of our vineyards are planted with grape varieties such as Dornfelder, Lemberger, and Cabernet Sauvignon. German Pinot Noir (Spätburgunder) has already gained some acclaim, but many other red grape varieties remain largely unknown. We aim to change this and present to you a selection of exciting red wines that we believe have a promising future in Germany.

Burgundy Red

The red wines from the Burgundy region in France are among the most esteemed wines in the world. They are renowned for their elegance and complexity and are often regarded as one of the highest expressions of Pinot Noir. The diversity of soils and microclimates in Burgundy ensures that wines from neighboring vineyards can have very different characters.

Domaine de la Romanée-Conti

If the wine world had to agree on a winery that represents the pinnacle of quality, it would perhaps be Domaine de la Romanée-Conti. Among connoisseurs, this estate is simply abbreviated as DRC, and these three letters carry significant weight. The domaine is located in the quiet village of Vosne-Romanée, near some of the best vineyard sites in Burgundy. DRC's eight Grand Cru vineyards are managed organically and with meticulous attention to detail. During my last visit, I even observed the vineyards being worked with horses to preserve the soil.

Rhône Grape varieties

The Rhône River flows from the Alps to the Mediterranean Sea. Along its banks lie many famous vineyards where the primary grape varieties Syrah and Grenache Noir thrive. Wines from these vineyards are enjoyed all over the world. For me, a great Syrah is simply essential in any wine cellar, and the wines from Châteauneuf-du-Pape are unmatched worldwide.

Bordeaux Varietals

Several decades ago, Bordeaux began to conquer the world with its grape varieties. Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Cabernet Franc are now grown in almost every wineproducing country in the world. The famous oenologists from the region around the Gironde River advise wineries on all continents. There are certainly many reasons for this, but one of the most important is that Bordeaux truly produces outstanding wines.

Bella Italia

Italy, red wine, and good food have always been the recipe for a successful evening. The Romans spread viticulture to vast parts of the European mainland but kept many of their own grape varieties for themselves. From the lively and fruit-forward Sangiovese to the structured and aromatic Nebbiolo, Italy has much more to offer in terms of wine diversity.

Magical Malta

TA' BETTA

Ta' Betta is a picturesque, 4-hectare family-run winery in Girgenti, Malta, dedicated to producing high-quality wines with distinctive personality and aging potential. The terraced vineyard offers impressive views of the Maltese landscape, including the historic city of Mdina and the harbor city of Valletta. In 2002, they began to realize their dream: producing high-quality wines with distinctive personality and aging potential. The Camilleri family has invested a lot of time and effort to make the winery what it is today – a place where the family's passion and commitment are evident in every aspect.

Australian Red Wines

The wine industry in Australia primarily focuses on the southern regions where the climate is moderate. Between the 30th and 40th southern parallels, mild summer temperatures of around 20°C prevail, although there are often low precipitation levels, necessitating artificial irrigation in many vineyards. Australian wine law mandates that over 85% of the wine must originate from the specified region indicated on the label. This law, enforced by the Wine and Brandy Corporation since 1987, ensures compliance through regular monitoring.

Californian Wines

"All the leaves are brown, and the sky is grey..." sang The Mamas and the Papas in their folk rock classic in 1965. These lyrics seem to describe our current view out the window. California has long been a dream destination for many, but when this song was first played, no one suspected that the Golden State would one day become one of the most important and exciting wine regions in the world. California's wine history is relatively short, but the wines influenced by the Pacific Ocean in this region are among the best in the world, and they continue to improve.
